

Mrs. Payne: My folks used to sell it by the carload out.

(Yeah they used to weigh more than now.)

First that was (not clear) in then by the car--

(It was Alva?)

No, Albion.

(Albion)

Yeah. We just lived mile and quarter from that railroad station.

(Uh-huh).

There was a little depot there. Store, hay barns, and things like that.

That was all of the town, just a store.

(And that was the Katy?)

No that was--

(Oh--On the Frisco.)

Mrs. Payne: What? Yes--Frisco.

(Uh-huh)

North

(And you were on the other one.)

Uh-huh, Frisco. (not clear) Portland. MK & T run right through that place.

(Well, now Afton is an old settlement too, isn't it?)

Mrs. Payne: Yes, it's older than I am. (laughter)

Yeah.

(I wonder how it got its name? I've always been interested in names of places.)

I know (not clear). Would be Neil Ross there.

(Uh-huh. Neil Ross)

He died last March at Claremore. There was during a big snow storm.

(Yeah, that was during the snow storm.)

Then too, wasn't she down in (not clear)--down in (not clear) land.
