

Maude: Sure have. I've seen a lot of changes. Good roads for one thing.

(Yeah you have roads now.)

Maude: Yeah we didn't used to have them.

(I know it's certainly a blessing compared with the old ones. What business places did they have here in Zena--besides the stores? Did they have--?)

Maude: They never had anything only a store and a post office.

(Store and post office.)

Maude: Then they had a blacksmith shop and a grist mill.

(And a grist mill. All right--)

Maude: Yeah they had a grist mill. And--

(Not clear--town is Zena?)

Ben: Oh, I don't know. It's been back--from 65, 70 years I guess.

(Yeah. They used to have more there in that town than what they've got now, didn't they?)

Ben: Well, they had a little school back down this way, about a quarter.

They had two or three stores there once. Then they finally all quit, and one moved up there where that old building is across from the south part.

(Yeah.)

Ben: It's been there. I don't know how many years. And they had a store on each side of the road off and on all the time.

(The Hampton's and Kelly seemed to be the store keepers, weren't they?)

Ben: Yeah, they're the store keepers there now.

BLACKSMITH SHOP, SMALL STORES, SAWMILLS, NO GRISTMILLS

(Well you had a blacksmith shop too at one time there.)

Ben: Yeah.

(Didn't you?)

Ben: We used to have a blacksmith shop there.

(And wasn't there a grist mill?)

Ben: Aw-w-w there used to be saw mills you know they grind--

(Yeah they'd grind most anything.)
