

(Shoulder). And when he got shot in here, why then--and the other fellow Jim DuRoy--I think he was shot there, too.

(That's in the shoulder?)

Yeah, he got shot in the shoulder, but just right--my uncle anyway.

I might have got that kind of puzzled, but I think that's him. My uncle got shot here in this shoulder blade--

(Collar bone?)

Yeah, collar bone. That's where he got shot. They just barely took him home and I remember, I remember when they were doctoring him. My father was going with this woman. He drove for her. Yeah, I remember that, and then he drove for her, I think. And we went. They were having-- That's what doctored him, was these Buffalo people. No white doctors.

Yeah, And they had him four days. Oh, he was sick! No kind of a shot or nothing! Just that medicine they put on him and drink. Prayers and drink. That's all they gave him. No eats or nothing. Couldn't eat or nothing.

(Well was he in a house when they doctored him?)

No, they just had a great big dancing hall, they call it. It's kind of a hall, like, and it had just ground earth floor. But they had nice bedding in there, too.

(Oh, this was a frame building?)

Yeah, it was frame building--but it was board building, but it was made round. It was round roof on it that would open up on the top, you know, like this. And windows in it. They used that to dance in. Had their recreation in there. That's the kind--

(Was that up at Red Rock?)

Yeah that was at Red Rock. And oh, they just had a big time, four days.

The fourth day they had to make him walk. I never will forget that.
