

You see? It's safe. No poison in there.

(Let's see now, he's got a wooden spoon about like this, four inches in diameter, and then on the inside it's got--)

Kinda a hole--kind of a--that shape.

(Well is it just about that big around?)

No, not that small. About like this.

(Bow-shaped?)

Yeah, bow-shaped. And then he takes it and he pours water in there and that way he don't spread all around and slops it all over. He just kind of stirs it around and it's all good. Then he drinks it to show these others that it is good and safe. Now, it's ready. They can take it home and give it to anybody they want to, to doctor with. So we call that "Buffalo Medicine." It's--it can tell you--honest to tell you Judy, that this medicine--.
