

No.

(What was his name in Apache?)

Well, the way they call him, da.sa'a.coh. He's a big man, and in English it's pronounced Big Man. da.sa a.coh

(Was he really a big man?)

No, he's not no large man, but I don't know where he's got that name he's got.

(What was your mother's name?)

Well, I wouldn't know how it's pronounced, that word, but through the Indian Office they got it pronounced Gos-sis-sin-a. That's the way they pronounce it. I don't know how they would pronounce it in Apache.

(What does that mean?)

I don't know--it's a name, I guess. Only way I know how to pronounce it. But her Indian name, that's just what it is, I guess. That's the way she's enrolled in Indian department.

(Did you ever hear her say her Indian name?)

No.

(Could you tell me about when it was that your dad was farming?)

Well, ever since I remember--when I was a young guy. say about--just when I find out he was farming. About 1910, I guess. All up in there till I got way up of age, he was still farming. Because he passed away in 1925. But he quit-- Well, I helped him all that year. Well, I helped him start farming when I got to be seventeen years old, myself. I helped him along up till his death. Sometimes he turned things over to me, and I just went ahead and worked--farmed it myself. He tell me what to do and how to do it, you know. He show me how to--you might say set the plow and things like that. And I learned it and I done the work myself.
