

(Did you always live with your mother and father?)

Yes.

(Where did you live when you were growing up?)

We lived back west of Fort Cobb. Between Carnegie and Fort Cobb.

(Is that that place we went one time where you were saying the tornado blew away the house?)

Yeah, that's right.

(It's on the north side of the Indian road?)

Yes.

(Did you live there all the time you were growing up?)

Yes.

FRED'S FAMILY'S ALLOTMENTS

(Is that where your dad farmed?)

Yes. First he farmed down in the bottom--the river bottom. See that 160 acres, I don't know how they got that place divided. Eighty acres sets down in the bottom and the other eighty sets up on the hill where we was living when that tornado took the house I was telling you. That's the way it is divided. Eighty down in the bottom and eighty up on the hill.

(Was that your father's allotment?)

Yeah.

(Where was your mother's allotment?)

Back up here by Broxton. I got that one now.

(How come your mother got her allotment quite a ways off from your dad's?)

Well, I guess they went around. People went around and pick out their lots, you know--their land, their allotments. That's where they got mine. My dad pick the land out there and I sold it. It adjoined this place of my mother's I got now.
