

Yeah.

(And after his lease expired, you all moved in?)

Moved in, yes.

(Then where did you live before you moved there?)

We was all around that place, camped. We live in a tent.

(How about tipis--did anybody live in a tipi, then?)

No.

(Was your tent really big that you lived in?)

Oh, just a tent like you see, you know. Pretty good sized--any, about six or seven strips. Some of them are five strips.

BOKE'S STORE IN ANADARKO

(Back in those days, when they used tents like that--did they ever make those tents themselves or did they buy them ready made or have them made?)

Well, I never did know of my mother making a tent. She could, I guess, but I never heard no--they bought a tent here in Anadarko. There used to be a man--they got that sign that says, "Roberts' T.V.?" That man used to have all Indian stuff like tents and hardware, and groceries--all combined. You can go in there and buy your hardware and groceries and buy your material. He's got dry goods and hardware and groceries--things like that. All in one store.

(That's that Roberts' Store?)

Yeah. That used to be A.B.C. Store, they called it.

(Was Roberts running it?)

No, no. The people that run it are all dead.

(What was their name?)

Boke's.

(Didn't he have another store down there by Rainy Mountain?)
