

(Well.)

And just burn that. It wouldn't be more than a match. But it gave--had more light than a match.

(Well that wasn't very strong light though. But it was all you had.)

(not clear) when I picked up, read a lot of them instructions. Course in his business he gets everything that tells about what people ought to use and how they doing all these things.

GRANDFATHER LIVED AN ACTIVE LIFE - DIED AT AGE OF 106 YEARS

(Son: One time when I (not clear)).

And so (not clear). Grandfather--father's father lived to be a hundred and six. And I never knew grandfather to turn down anything he wanted to eat. There was two things he always had. And that was buttermilk and sorghum molasses.

(Son: And his chewing tobacco, chewing tobacco. Don't forget that.) (laughs)

He chewed tobacco. Father didn't use it at all. He used to grow it.

(Well.)

Grow tobacco for grandfather. And cure the leaves and pack them down in the box. And when they were ready to twist, he made a twist out of it. I think that when I--whenever I think of these things--what makes them happen.

(not clear) about grandfather. He was a 106 when he passed away. And he wasn't help less till the very last. And it wasn't very long when he took with--something that took him. He wasn't sick but for three days till he was gone. And he could see. Never did have a pair of glasses on him.

(Well.)

He didn't read but he could see. He could go himself around to whatever he wanted to go. (Not clear) and there was hardly a family that could (not clear). Raised twelve children. Six boys and six girls. And they all lived and married and had families of their own.
