

(Son: That was her grandpa's. And he was in the Civil War.)

No, this wasn't grandfather's. I don't know whether he had one or not.

(I see, Was this his name?)

Yes. The only--

(H. F. Early.)

Frank was his name.

(Frank Early. He carried this all through the Civil War. Well, that's wonderful.)

What time he was in. I don't remember about time.

(Oh, if this could talk! He could tell you some things that--)

(Son: Oh-h-h!)

Oh so many things.

(Son: Mother is that a picture of Frank we've got in there?)

I don't know. What picture that is.

(Son: I don't know. I thought it (not clear).)

(Let's see this Testament was printed in 1858.)

Well I'll be! I've never noticed that! 1858.

(My goodness!)

It sure is.

(Well, it's nice that you've been able to keep it this long.)

Well grandfather kept it. And then he gave it to father. And course I kept it.

(Surely. You didn't tell me about the--)

AN OLD BRASS KEY - CONCERNING STRIP PAYMENTS

(Son: Her dad was about 70 or 80 years old. I forgot how old he was. Down there in what's now the Flint District. Southeast of Stilwell. Well, it was west of Stilwell.)

(Yeah.)