

He plowed these lands. And dad (not clear). He plowed up there at (not clear). Well until all through the year. We thought he was able to keep that old house, that his grandmother had lived in. She was a widow. That was some years before we had to go down northeast to where mother had a Home-coming--Seminary Home-coming, saw a key that looked just exactly like that. Except for the handle on (not clear) on one down there. Said this key is the one they used on the money chest, that carried the money from Tahlequah out to the payments--where they made the payments. When the payments came in.

(Son: When the payments came in, to that--what's that place over there?)

Flint Court House.

(Son: Flint Court House.)

(Flint Court House.)

(Son: Now where dad found that key was about ten or twelve miles away from that court house.)

Yeah. Well, say isn't that a historical item?)

(Son: Oh brother, you're not woofing!)

(What is that, about seven inches long?)

(Son: Yeah, seven and a half from the tip to the handle of it.)

(And I wonder what kind of metal that is.)

(Son: Brass, I imagine.)

(Yes, it was certainly made for some kind of strong box.)

(Son: Yes sir! What they used to haul the money out for the strip payments.)

COMPARES COOKING METHODS IN EARLY DAYS WITH PRESENT DAY METHODS

(Not clear)--some made with me. 'Course I was brought up different. And I practiced hard on my bringing up. It's going into one of these markets and groceries. They never market like the way they used to be. Like
