

Oh, well what my grandmother used to make that I've never been able to make, and that was hominy. Take the corn, and take the lye from the old ash hopper--fill a big old iron pot and carry all the wood ashes put in there. And then pour water on that, and that cleaned the corn. When it was clean, then cooked it. She pulled coals out of the fireplace, on the hearth and (not clear) out from under the wood.

(End of Side A)

(This interview continued on Side B - Part I.)