

(Well.)

But I haven't seen any this year.

PASSENGER PIGEONS ARE EXTINCT

(Son: Say I know something better about that. Why not tell about these passenger pigeons.)

Why mother said there were so many passenger pigeons they would just break the limbs off the trees where they roost. People would go to their roosts to catch some of them.

(Well.)

And I never saw one in my lifetime.

(Son: Mom we saw one, one time back up there over near Tenkiller pasture.)

Well I mean I never saw one.

(Son: Oh you didn't, alright. I saw one out on pasture one time.)

(Not clear) The people would go out and kill 'em.

(Yeah the last one that they knew of died in 1913, I believe.)

(Son: The year I was born.)

(Yeah.)

Used to be wild turkeys when we lived down there. Not a time went by daddy didn't get a turkey. Over on that--it's on the other side of that mountain. So when it come time for them to go to gobling, you know. They'd know. Daddy'd get his gun ready. Take it along, slip in on 'em and get him a turkey.

WILD HOGS WERE USED FOR FOOD

(Son: I might have another interesting item for you. There used to be an old German lived over here, he's been dead for three or four years. Brown, C. R. Brown. His folks come to this hill. Him and old Walt Cavanaugh that lives up there now. And he told Brown he came here in 1888. And stayed forty years, till 1892. Now he and his brother used to get out and round-up-
