

(Yeah.)

My grandfather, he had a farm.

(At Baron? Yeah, just a little pasture to farm. Well, what did they raise there?)

Corn. Raise mostly corn, feed and pumpkins.

(Corn, feed and pumpkins.)

All they had to do to raise hogs and cattle was just let 'em run out, open range you know.

(Well. And they just let them run out there in the woods.)

Uh-huh. We build some troughs and put out salt in places.

(Yeah.)

When they wanted salt, they'd come up.

(Uh-huh.)

They sold them all, though, when they left.

(Yeah. Well, that was in the days when they just had rail fences.)

Yes.

(Keep the fields protected.)

EARLY TRAVEL

A long time ago about the only way you could get out of here was on the railroad. Then. Going to Wagoner or going on up north.

(That must have been quite a thrill to ride that train across the river.)

Well, it was.

(Go to Wagoner in the morning. And come back in the evening.)

(Sentence not clear.)

(Uh-huh.)

Drive to (inaudible).

(Well my goodness. I guess this was pretty country before they got to changing it all and cutting it up with roads. But I know it has changed
