

Well, yes, I know some of the old time people, that is these people were - some of them was named Blackbirds and some Buffalo. And Logans, Roman Logans, Frances Abbot, Joe Abbot, John Abbot, Martha Pryor, and Paul - and George Pitts and his wife Mary - worked for those in their homes and feasts - they'd have big feasts on special occasions.

(Della do you - way back there in them olden days, do you remember how they travelled around in those days?)

They traveled around in those days in buggies. They had no other way to go about in buggies and wagons and drove horses. And I (talking in the background to Mr. Maker) - and I've known this man that's here now talking to me, Leonard Maker, I've known him ever since he was born. And was in their home and worked for them when he was just a small baby, and - for him and his - for his mother and father. And also knowed his grandmother and his grandfather. (Indian name given) They lived on a creek north of Hominy here.

HOW GRANDPARENTS OF LEONARD MAKER LIVED

(What did they - how did they live, my grandfather and mother?)

Your grandfather and mother, they lived in little old houses - there were just a long house, they didn't have any bedrooms, only just one big long room. And they had their beds in one corner and they had their cooking facilities in the other corner, and they would roll a table cloth, an oil cloth on the floor and spread out and have their lunch prepared on this floor. And I've been there early in the morning when they would be one in the camp - this way a camp now, they lived in camps. They didn't live in no separate homes around. They lived in villages, they called them. And this was called a Minki-wah-tanki (?) camp. And that's been many - I knew him. He was an old, old Indian. And he would have these people live there in his camp. And that's where this Leonard Maker's grandfather and grandmother lived.
