

SEVERAL FAMILIES LIVED IN EACH CAMP - CLANS

(Now Della, in those days way there...)

Yeah, I knew your dad there, too, when (discussion going on in the background.)

(Way back there in those days like, ah, - that these people, seemed like they lived in more or less a few groups of people.)

They did.

(And that was very little before the allotment and they did - and they - could you remember who else lived out there in that camp?)

Nettie Luttrell lived out there and Henry Roan which got killed later.

(But there were several families in each camp?)

Yes, they was about a dozen families that would live in each camp. And Louis Okashy she lived there, her and her husband.

(What was Mr. Okashy's name, I thought I remembered it?)

I can't remember it.

(Well those families that lived together - were, weren't they tied in a relationship to each, or, say just one big family, or how did they account for being in one place?)

They seem to be sort of a clan that lived in one village.

(And that one group was out there at that one camp there you told us.)

That's right.

EARLY DAY DRESS - MEN AND WOMEN

(Now in those days, Della, what sort of just tell it in your own words, what - how did the Osages, the men and the women dress in those days?)

Well, they - the men would wear nothing but - practically but a breechcloth and just leggins, and a shirt, and they would wear a blanket around him.

That would be the clothing, the men's clothing. And - the older men. And the women would wear a skirt - they called it a skirt, which was a wrap around skirt, it wasn't no gathered skirt. It was just a skirt that wrap
