

MORE ABOUT WHY THE OSAGE PEOPLE WANTED TO GO TO ANOTHER LOCATION

Yeah. Well, they had quite an idea of getting away from this Osage and getting out where they could get some land of their own - I mean some land where it wasn't settled. Then just bring the Osages out there - all of them to moved. Cause they all had money enough that they could have made a stake there and could have had a village of their own if there hadn't have been other there come and croach in on them which, perhaps with would have. See, they didn't do much of their own working when they got money, they hired help. Nearly everyone of them had cooks, and had drivers - they all had --- (Someone to just be around there whether they did anything or not. There seem like to me there was always extras - someone extra round there to do something that had to be done, well, they would be there - there'd be someone hthere.)

Yes, yes.

(And, in the twenties, back in there, can you remember, Della, how they got the - or rather playing this ah, football? You remember any of these - how they got started playing this football down here - Who was there? Did you ever go to any of the games?)

No. No, I don't think I ever did. You see, I was pretty busy, I'd be working. I worked so much for them that - in their homes and around - I didn't have, no I never did have time to go around to footballs. But I know they did. They're quite, they're, they're up in that football business. Right now they are. We've got some of the best boys right here in Hominy, right now. This Hominy has been beat'n everything.

OSAGES WERE FINE PEOPLE

And, what ah, just in your own words, did you, what did you - how and what do you think of Indians, Osages, now that you've been around all your life, and just ah, what is your ideas?)

I think they are might fine people. I really do. I like everyone of them.
