

(We did tell 'em that this one day you would like to mention in this tape that you had forgotten.)

We stopped to this place and we start looking for this cafe or restaurant and there wasn't any. And there was no camping ground of any kind and we were all wantin'--was ready for lunch, but the cafe's was closed. And we found out where we could--they could open a cafe for us--a restaurant and they told us to help ourself. And we took our groceries and went in and they prepared our meal for ourselves. And we just served each other like the cafe was running--

(Why did they--how come they turned it over to you?)

Because there wasn't any place to eat. There was no other place to eat.

Katherine Maker: Well, did you ask?

Why, yes.

Katherine Maker: Who?

Why, the owner, I guess--we ask around there and they told us the owner would be down. And he opened up for us and told us to just go ahead and help ourself, and prepare your food and there's dishes and cooking ware and what have you. We brought our groceries in. We had our groceries.

(You mean, the cafe was--I mean, wasn't in operation or was just closed for the day or what?)

It wasn't in operation.

(I thought, maybe, it was just closed for the day or something.)

No. This town was so small that I guess they didn't have any business so they was closed.

(How big was this restaurant?)

Well, it wasn't too small, it wasn't too big.

(Was it a frame house, or a brick house or some building?)

It musta been a frame house.
