

(It seems that way.)

Anymore there ain't one parent now that doesn't turn them loose. And people that's a raising someone else's kid. They want to raise them up right.

(That's right.)

And they'll try to.

(Yeah those orphans that were raised way back yonder in those old days. Lot of them have told me they were raised as orphans. And they said they were more than fortunate. After having seen some of the others that were raised by their own parents. Lot of them were just turned loose and raised themselves.)

That's right.

Molly: Never had as much trouble too.

(Uh-huh.)

You take me and him here. We raised several children to be grown and married. Besides our own. We had six of them. They just come stay with us. And we just keep them. They're no problem.

Frank: Yeah we used to live in that house right there. The man rents. Had a little well drill. He'd drill wells. He get his pay. He'd get drunk. Wife was just read a book all day. And the kids have to come over here and eat.

(Well.)

Then we moved down here on the prairie. And then they moved on up the road a ways.

End of Interview.
