

Uh-huh, we went over there to eat dinner. We went on the train--

(From here, you went over there on the train?)

Uh-huh.

(From Hominy to Oatman?)

That's when that was taken. I don't know this lady here. And I have pictures here of John Wilson (36). As he goes by Dr. Oatman, they call him Moon on the moon (7). They call him the Moon Hotel. He was the one that brought this here--

(I think that is the most of the pictures that they have--)

This is the one. I notice all the Oatman homes had this picture in their homes. And I have another picture here of these young Indians. From surroundings, this picture had been taken in Washington, D.C. One of the Indians happened to be my sister, Eva Bean (37), and Chief Fred Lookout's daughter, Mary Lookout. And this other one in--her name was Mary Ware from Pawhuska. They had--make this trip to Washington D.C., with delegation. And I have a very nice picture of Mr. Andrew Penn (38), which was original from Hominy. (This here was Katherine's uncle?)

Grandpa.

(Oh, Albert. Albert (39))

Oh, Albert instead of Andrew. I don't know who this picture is. Then I have another picture here. These Indians are from Pawhuska (40). Their name--oh my! I can't hardly think of their Indian--they have their Indian names and I can't hardly--it's very nice picture of the Indians. They are well dressed in strange clothes. They have--seem to have moccasins and leggings on and beautiful shawls which are, I guess they are in cotton and Indian shirts, but I just can't remember their names.

(Do you know any of--who is kin to 'em?)

I think that's Josephine Pryor's mother, but I don't know their name. And
