

know. They call me Commodore Ross." She said, "My goodness!" It was right in front of the restaurant up there. She said, "Wo they have--sell, chicken in there?" I said, "Well, sometimes they got chicken." Said, "What would it be worth?" I said, "Well, I don't know. Cost you around a dollar a meal in there." She said, "Do they have pie?" I said, "Yeah, they got pie." She said, "What do they cost?" I said, "They cost 25 cents a piece." She said, "My God, I'll just cook my own." (Laughter)

(Yeah, I know who she is.)

(Interruption)

U. S. MARSHAL GILSTRAP - WICKLIFF BOYS

Yeah, we had U. S. marshalls.

(Here in territory days.) (Who were some of them? Do you remember?)

Well, I remember them, if I can just recall their names. Gilstrap was one of them. And that fellow out of Vinita, I can't recall his name now. But anyway, he's the one that these Wickliff boys, you know, he's the one that started all that trouble among them. Got a marshal out of Vinita, but they sent him word to not cross that river no more. And he didn't, he resigned. (Tape inaudible) you see.

(Yeah, I know they killed Gilstrap)

Them Wickliff boys, you know, I knew them well. I used to live south of town here about three or four miles. They'd come up there and stay all night with me. I'd come up there and get ammunition from them. I believe they was as good as shots as I ever seen.

(Well)

You could just take a marble or something and throw it and they'd take a winchester and bust it.

(Tape inaudible)

All of that there (inaudible). It was just kind of a drunken fight started it at a dance, you see. Well, this fella at Vinita come over
