

Well, I'll tell you what they used to call that, that up in that holler used to be called "Possum Holler". That's the only thing that ever I ever knew they called it. Swings--they's two swings up there.

There's one in this holler and one them is up here. Both good swings.

I can't figure why this Red Walker lived there. Why he could make a fortune.

(Inaudible.)

MURDER INCIDENT - NO BONDS NECESSARY FOR INDIANS

...fellow by name of Chewey, full-blod Indian, they killed him.

He was kind of an outlaw, I had an uncle by marriage... 'cause they's both in trouble. They told them if they'd get old Jack, old Chewey, why they'd pay 'em. They's both scared of him, so they went up there one night and got old Chewey to playing, he was kind of a fiddler, they got him to playing the fiddle and shot him and killed him.

(Well, I'll be doggone.)

(Inaudible) Bolen shot him and then he made Nig Mitchell shoot him.

(Ground noise.)

(Inaudible) tried to do something--

(That's right.)

Why, you take it way this country going now, you can't tell what's going to happen.

(No.)

(Tape inaudible.)

When I was a kid, might say, very small, they this here law would take 'em down here to Tahlequah and whip 'em. They never put 'em on no bond. All they got to do just take your word. Just tell you when you come back here to get your whipping. There wasn't no bond made, like it is now. You can't hardly get a man to go on his bond.

(That's right. They stood up to it, too.)

You doggone right!
