

Yes, T-shaped. Oh, I don't know. I don't know where the paper is. I should have a copy of it somewhere. I may, I don't know I look for it some-time ago and couldn't find it. Mr. Wright run the paper here. He wrote quite a bit and first published it in the paper, but I don't know where there's any copies of those papers. He dug back and dug back stuff that really was historical you know--

(Yes)

Course I was going to school there it was 1904 and '05.

(1904 and '05)

When they disbanded school.

(Yes)

Course that's when statehood come in right along about then.

(Yes)

They went to building state schools. There's one built on my home place where I was born and so we just set and went to school there. I started in 1909.

(Yeah. What was the name of that school?)

That was Sunny Slope.

(Sunny Slope)

But we went oh, couple or three years.

(Static on tape; sentence not clear.)

(Yes)

Then she was a teacher at Sunny Slope also for a number of years.

(Well, so much of this--)

I went to school there in 1909.

(Sunny Slope)

It was little over few hundred yards from where our home was. It's all gone now practically, all gone.

(Yes)
