

(Well what other communities were in existence back in those days?)

Jenny: Had a book store over here. What else did you have down here beside the bookstore?

(Flint: Who?

Jenny: What other stores were there down here besides the bookstore? Bookstore used to sit right over there on our land, don't you know?

Mr. Flint: That was the store, was it?

Jenny: Yes.

Mr. Flint: There was three or four of them.

Jenny: There was a bookstore, I know, because the foundation was over there by John F. Chandler dug it up and threw it in the mud holes over there.

(Well. Yeah, I imagine they would have general store and blacksmith shop.)

Mr. Flint: Lumber yard.

(Lumber yard)

Mr. Flint: (sentence not clear).

(Yeah.)

(Sentence not clear)

Jenny: Was the Black District over here then?

Mr. Flint: Who?

Jenny: They didn't have Black School District over here then.

Mr. Flint: No there wasn't no Black School District then, did they?

Jenny: This was all the little community that was around here at that time.

Mr. Flint: Didn't have no Black School over there or over here either. School house over on the creek about two miles. Indian didn't have no houses, just a shack, put up where they lived.

(Well, Where did you go to do your trading now, away from here uh--)

Mr. Flint: Went to two different school. Me and my sister both of us, we went to (name not clear). And they told us couldn't get enough kids down there to have
