

Yeah -- You could find the eggs everywhere.

(Uh-huh)

Ketchums would call 'em names but we just call 'em hills. We could find lots of 'em in these wheat fields.

(Yeah)

MANY GRAVES MOVED BEFORE THE DAM WAS BUILT

Some of these big fellows come in here and married with the Indians, you know. Plant lots of wheat and corn and oats, you know.

(Uh-huh)

I'd just could grow more corn wild. You see. No do we don't do any of that.

(Yeah.)

(Not clear) Down there at my brothers. The Ketchum Graveyard they call it.

(Yeah)

Well '38 and '39. They passed a law, the government did. The head of this dam here. After this dam went in, that all them graves would be moved. Up right up here on -- You haven't been up to this graveyard? (Not clear) how long. I think the oldest one was Conner. And the next one was old man Yode's wife. She was a Ketchum.

(Yeah)

I used to know all them. Nat Dixon over on Mustang.

(Yeah. Yeah I know that's an old cemetery too. I don't know just where it is.)

I know four or five different families over there. Every one of them. Greenfeather.

(Yeah)

(Not clear) Greenfeather. And Blackhawks I believe.

(Yeah)
