

I call him uncle. He brought me a good blanket like this (a pendleton blanket). Yeah. I know my folks now over there.

(What was your grandmother's name?)

Her name is Utes Lady.

(How do you say that in Kiowa?)

There's one of my niece named after her. One of my niece.

(Interruption and recorder turned off. When conversation resumes Eugenia is talking about people want to hear her father's story and how she has refused to tell it. Her father was a Buffalo Medicine Man and she now has his buffalo medicine kit. Apparently several people have approached her and her family in an attempt to acquire the kit. Her daughter, Mrs. McDaniels, brought the medicine kit in to show me. The articles were in a brief case and the articles brought out and shown to me. The remainder of this interview consists largely of comments on the articles in the buffalo medicine bag.

DISCUSSION OF ARTICLES IN BUFFALO MEDICINE KIT

. . .my son, he's working over there at Dallas. He told that man. He said, "I can't tell my mother that. When she say no, you can't make her." They want me to tell it about my father. My father's story is just like that. My father got lost. Don't run it in there--(telling me to shut off the recorder).

(Interruption in recording)

--you know that buffalo (unintelligible word). My grandma, she's good medicine woman. And they had a war with Utes. They shot her right here (in right side of chest). And the bullet wouldn't go through him. And the buffalo give him the power. (Speaks in Kiowa. I think her daughter is bringing
