

and he's half-breed or less than half. But that Mrs. McElhaney, she's full-blood Kiowa. She don't believe nothing. She wants to take all the white man way, and we don't get along with her too well.

Bob: (talking to me) Well, another thing--I notice that they'll have a kin in Viet Nam, they'll have a big benefit and there'll be a lot of Indians--Why?

Mrs. Stegall: (talking to Jess about Mrs. McElhaney) She believes all white?

Jess: All white, yeah. But yet, she comes in and wears Indian earrings and bracelets and she comes to church with Indian blankets. And when she goes on these trips she wears a buckskin dress and moccasins--to these conventions.

(I think it's continuing their tradition of honoring a warrior--)

Bob: They think that God's gonna look down on that boy or something--take care of him, or what is it?
