

(Yes, I remember reading much about--)

Now the Father cemetery is farther on east of there, but I couldn't tell you 'cause the men wouldn't talk about the old John Father,

(Well.)

He died; they found him dead, I believe. They put him on his own (inaudible).

(Yes.)

'Course some of 'em just one or two graves, you know--

(Well, even then just--)

(Inaudible) couple years ago they were down (inaudible) how many they was going to run into if they went through that (inaudible). And I said, "Well I know at least three and that was this one here and the Teehee cemetery and the Parish cemetery." I suppose you got the--Adair cemetery--

(I'll ask Claude.)

Ask Claude about that, he probably will remember and he forgot about it; but I remember going to his funeral. I went with my grandparents, I think--I followed my grandmother around so much. They went and they-- now his son--now this one out here at Rose, a mile east of Rose, and there's quite a few Indians buried there. Now this Hummingbird, old man Hummingbird, family all but himself is buried there. And one of them is Jess Hummingbird--

(I knew him, I think.)

He's the only one that's got a stone, and they had a brother named Swimmer, his mother and Maggie, his sister, were all buried down there. There's lots of Indians buried out there. (Sentence not clear.)

(This is an old country through here.)

Yes, it is an old country.
