

(I know--)

His wife had, oh, I imagine his wife had (inaudible), and his wife had a daughter about my age way back when his wife died. It wasn't his daughter. One she had by Farmer.

(Yes.)

And he must--he must be right around one hundred. Let's see, Mother was in--eighty-nine years old when (inaudible). I haven't seen him in long time.

(Yes, ma'am.)

(Inaudible) died and I thought it was him.

(Your mother was a Raper. Now where were they settled?)

I don't know. Down by Salina, somewhere.

(I know there's Rapers around Kenwood.)

Well, down around somewhere in Salina, and my grandmother's first marriage was Adair. He was a white man, part. He had one daughter, and her name was--I can't think.

(Yeah.)

I don't know where the Downings are.

(They've scattered everywhere. And your father was--)

My father was an Adair.

(Adair.)

Adair is named after him.

(After the town of Adair. Yeah, I knew--)

See that is Northside.

(That would stem in from some of your ancestors.)

Ancestors way back. I didn't know the Adairs too well. Now most of them are up around Tulsa. One of 'em married a Lawrence.

(Well my goodness.)

She was a white woman and real interesting to talk to. Her mind was so
