

way they find 'em. Whole quarter cut it down one side and like that. They cut the middle just where it joins, that's alright. Where they come together, where the ribs come together. They cut that. (Irrelevant conversation.)

(Like, you know, did you visit many camps back in there. Was there many camps around all over here. I guess there were, weren't there.)

Yeah, used to visit that way. I could tell you how they do, but take too long to tell it.

(That's alright we got plenty of time.)

Sometime maybe we go to Grayhorse. Then maybe we want to go over there.

There was about 4 boys, hired boys, and our boy they go over there and tell 'em what they want to do. They had quite a committee over there.

Want to dance and they go over there. When they get there, they look for that man that has--I don't know, the man, what do you call 'em, you know what they are-- (Indian word) In charge of that drum, I guess.

(In charge of the dance.)

They tell 'em, they bring things over there. They ask him if they could come. They gave all these that's on a committee, do-dah-hah, how many is there?

(Oh, there's several, you know, it comes on down, you know.)

Well the main ones, they call 'em, they come and talk about it. They talk about it. They tell 'em they give 'em certain days to come. Certain day to come, summertime, you know, summertime starts out. They give all time to think it over and they all the time they holding conference.

Conference, they talk about that. When it gets all finished and done well they sent them word from over there. They go and tell 'em about it.

Tell 'em when to come. Then when they do that then when they get it they come back and tell 'em when they're coming. They be ready for 'em.
