

boy. There over there, I've known him since that high. They call him (Indian name). He's around about 60, I guess.

(Way back there, when they had this Spanish American War, 1898, we had one, I remember always see it out cemetery was Sam Barker. Did he go out?)

Yeah, Arthur Bonicastle.

(Arthur Bonicastle.)

Sam Barker, Arthur Bonicastle. That's all that went over-here.

(That's about all, I guess. That's been quite a while ago. I don't know why, how come they had to go. Why did they go?)

Who?

(Them 2 boys.)

Was Arthur Bonicastle, China's Boxer uprising, something like that.

(Boxer Rebellion.)

Yeah.

(Oh, over in China.)

In China, he hurt fight in China War. Cut his stomach, wounded. Sam though I don't know where he went to. I never did find out.

(Maybe he went down in Cuba.)

Yeah Cuba, Spanish American War.

(Like in them days, what kinda government, what kinda rules did we live by, back there? There wasn't hardly no white people here then, I mean, the Osages did they have their own rules of government, I mean, is there laws?)

Well, they had a agent, you know.

(I mean just among Osages, you know. Just like when they was living here and somebody did wrong, how did they punish 'em?)
