

raise you up, carry you inside.

(Yeah I seen that.)

They always had some prize. Good race, race from over here, they all shoot a gun, you know. When they start, first one there, maybe get a horse and things like that, prize. I remember when your Aunt Martha got married to Clem Warsha over here where Burkhart is now. Old schoolhouse right around there, that's where they got married. Them Clem's folks come over here. Married him off to Aunt Martha. I remember that much.

(I guess they had quite a little big event in them . . .)

(Those days.)

There's lot of things. If I had good memory, memory, I'd say sometimes, said things, something like that. I know I never got much enjoyment out of life. I didn't get just to play or anything like that. When I got big enough I used to cut hay all time cut pop corn during summertime. (Not clear) in the corn, you know, had to get rid of 'em. I don't know where pop corn came from, but it cane makes your corn. Me and brother cut corn.

BABY NAMING CEREMONY

(Like in those days back there, where did the religion come in? Did the religion come in the marriage ceremony of any kind, like that?)

No not in marriage, but when the children born, children born, they going to give 'em name. What ever clan the father belong to, well they give 'em their name. They get name, they go through ceremony. Early morning, whatever clan you belong to that same clan all come. They come, go through them ceremonies. They had the head one, oldest one, oldest one, he name him, he name the baby. They give things away then. But my clan that's
