

I thought I'd go down and see her sometime. Stop by and talk to her, but I just never have got to do that. When I was at the hospital, you know, I'd lay there and think 'bout a lot a things you know--think about our people, what they doin' and all that and I just lay there and study about a lot a things and the doctor said, "Well, I think you be all right, but you need maybe--you need rest too."

(All that MaJella, uh, she said that she was--that we was, we was Fish Clan. Fish and Otter Clan. You never heard of that before huh?)

I never heard of that Otter Clan,

(But my dad's name is what?)

It was Ho- ha-wah(?) That's Fish, just going like that, I guess. He says, Ho-ha-wah.

(What was his father's name?)

Your grandpa. His name is Deer Horn Maker. In Indian it's Stahakasha(?)

(And that was my dad's name too, huh? Just Deer Horn.)

That was--I wonder whether that was the older man's name or younger man's name.

And your grandpa had another name. His name was Ma-sa-a-ta. Something about Ma, you know, medal. Something like that. And that was Ma-sa-dun(?) And this, Stahakasha(?) that was his name too. I guess that's two names there.

(Like, uh, --oh like these names. Now how many brothers did my dad have?)

Well, you know Edgar--Oh Ed--well I don't know what you call it. You know they had these two sets, but on his side was, I think, Roy--Roy was next to him, I believe.

(There was Edgar and my dad and Roy?)

Uh-huh. That's all I could remember--and Fred.

(Now, Fred and Jim another--?)

Fred was on your dad--on your dad--your dad and Roy and Fred.

(Edgar)

Edgar he's oldest, you know. Edgar and your dad and Roy and Fred. And your aunt

Ella, now that's your grandmother's sister. She had Jim. Jim Maker. So that would
