

they said they want me there. They said that was the custom to do that. So they did that and it was over and I came home. So that's what I did at that time.

(This dinner they kinda honored you with--was that just that reason to have that dinner for you or did they have a name for the baby or did they--)

No, not yet.

(Not yet, huh?)

Later I guess they named him:

(Did they--you might say that soon after--now just describe how young baby is-- how old it is when it's placed on this board.)

Well it doesn't have to be certain age. Just any time that they got a board like that why--even if they don't have a board, they have kept old board--new one I mean and just put it on old board sometimes.

(Now that--this board, seemed like to me the sooner you put'em on it, the sooner they grow accustomed to the board. I've seen in later years where they waited too long trying to put'em on a board and they won't stay on there.)

No. They won't stay on there. You know the body until the bones is matured more--

(Well if they put'em on there when their bones are--just when they are starting to grow.)

Just real young. Just first born.

(I'd say, the first few weeks place it on the board I imagine. Got accustomed to people and all that. Well this is kind of unimportant though, but back in there when you traveled--did you have a car then? Or did you have a car when you took that board down there?)

I believe I did. Uh-huh.

(Or a buggy. Must have been a kinda--wasn't too many cars around there then.)
