Uh-huh.

BURIAL CEREMONIES

(And like--just--just piece of wood, stake, that they put in these burial ceremonies, some put them up front, some head, some put it at the foot.)

Uh-huh.

(Irregardless of where they put it, what do these red things, stakes--what do they represent? What do they symbolize?)

They said that's fire, you know, just like light. Like that President I guess, over there. They got light, you know, burning, you know. They said that's going to burn till Judgment Day they said. That's way they got. That's way the, it was that's my folks say.. Light.

(Caddos?)

Huh?

(Caddos (not clear)--)

Caddos, they do that.

(Do they?)

Uh-huh.

(They build fire?)

They build fires--six days, isn't it? Sixth day it goes out. Six days it goes out, way they do.

(They build a fire for the grave?)

Uh-huh, they build it at the grave..

(The foot?)
