

And didn't even turn a (words not clear).

(Yeah. Is he dead?)

Well, no. The last I heard (not clear) Most Ridge Cemetery.

CEMETERIES - SOUTHWEST CITY

All of my folks they was buried there. Over there--

(Yes ma'am.)

Where you see them big markers flat. Lot of them were buried over there on their own place.

(Yes.) (Irrelevant words to children.)

Built a head around it. And that's where they was-- He was buried down there on (not clear) of the graveyard. (much static)

(Well, just wasn't any town where you could go.)

They hauled their stuff, their goods through Southwest City out here to run these stores in here.

(Yes.)

My dad, he was a hustler. He bought his stuff and goods from Southwest out here. If he had anything to sell, eggs or something he took them to Southwest. Pretty hard way.

(It must have been awful hard.)

It'd take him two days to go.

(Yes ma'am.)

Two days to go there and back.

(They had a hard way to make a living in those days.)

Well, it seems like to me it was just as good then as it is now.

(Why sure! They were all happy and they didn't expect too much.)

They was. And family was all well.

(That's right.)

They knew just what they had to do. It wasn't any worse on them than it is today, I guess.
