

She knows something about Doc Bennett. She stayed up there about a month. She started to cry. She wanted to go home.

(Uh-huh.)

So her husband went down there. So she had a boy working for (not clear). Go that a way.

(Yeah the Delawares have had a hard time too.)

Yeah.

(Where was you born and raised, Mr. Barker?)

I was born and raised southwest of here. You know where Wassie Cemetery is?

(Yeah)

Well go right there at that first section there, gate.

(Uh-huh)

Go north there. Three-quarters of a mile. Used to be an old house setting on a hill.

(Yeah.)

Up there. There's where I was born. Right there. I was born right there on my cousin (name not clear) place. Her allotment. (Not clear.)

(Yeah, that's the old allotment there.)

Yeah old allotment. That's where I was born. The rest of the kids was born down here edge of the timber. That's six miles west. Three miles north. On east side about, well that section line nearest to us. It was five miles and a quarter.

(Well there used to be a lot of Delawares through this country at one time. Wasn't there?)

There was.

(Now Chief Blue Jacket, now he was further on south. Wasn't he?)

He was south. He's got a boy. He used to work on county. But now, I don't
