

put them in the Osage Hills.

(What about the ducks and geese that used to be in this country?)

They just --.

(Well you know long time ago there used to be a lot of them.)

Yeah. But you can't find 'em like in them days.

(Yeah)

Yeah I've seen them out there. Just blacken that whole country out in there.

(Yeah)

Too many hunters now.

(I guess so. But they've all disappeared from the prairie country.)

Lots of them. Goes east every winter.

(Yeah)

We had quite a few this winter though. Here. Was still quite a few. My cousin up here. He told me down at post office, one day, about shooting. Shot several.

(Well, that's good.)

Shot down four on the water.

(Hum-m.)

Shot them right through the head. Pretty good shot. That's a straight line. Way back about a hundred yards.

(Uh-huh)

They kill crows. They fixed a trap. Get back in there. Didn't smoke at all. Just sit right quite and still. When them crows got to flying. Go to roost in there. Pull that string you know. (Not clear). That trap just go through. Just like you shot them.

(Yeah just like shot.)

They used to kill them by the hundreds. Now you don't hardly see a crow anymore.
