

Oh yes. They were just lot of people that was around in here. I don't know, course there haven't been that many since I've been here.

(Yes.)

They've kinda of worked away from home. Lot of people used to be in here but not much anymore. But there's some people that does.

(Well, do you have Indian families close by, Katie?)

This Miss Phillips was the only really, Indians and her niece that lived on this side of her.

(Yes.)

They're the only Indians right close that I know. There are some over in Liberty.

(Yes.)

There's quite a few over there. If I do I have to walk.

(Yeah.)

Changed, you know, that's how come them to (not clear).

(Yeah when they moved the Cherokees they--over here to Indian Territory, that one bunch they hid out and they knew how to get by without anything.)

Yes.

(Until they re-established themselves and reorganized and then petitioned the government to--)

Then they come out (much static--tape inaudible).

(Hard times I know were awful for some people and they had to do without so much. And I know your daddy he could tell you the same thing.)

Yeah.

(Too, they'd go without things so their children could have something.)

(Miss Sam's next sentence inaudible.)

(Well.)

Still have people living there on Mon--place what they call Monkey Island.

(Yes.)
