

Jess: The policy of the Bureau of Indian Affairs is that if a white man is married to an Indian, his family is not admitted either to the Indian hospital or any clinic, or if an Indian has a good job, his family is not admitted without cost to any Indian Hospital or clinic. But those that don't have no jobs--those that are enrolled--are otherwise entitled-- Especially if a white woman is married to an Indian, she has all the rights and privileges of her family to be recognized in an Indian hospital or clinic, because she's not the head of the family.

Bob: There's a hundred and twenty thousand dollars worth, right there. I worked two months and that's the cases that caused the Bureau to set up $120,000.00 for this program. (Referring to the B.I.A. putting up the month for Bob's job as Visiting Coordinator with the State Department of Education). CASE OF CRIMINAL ASSAULT OF OLD LADY BY TEENAGERS

Bob:--this policeman, I took him out there one day at noon. I was up there in Canton, eating my lunch right across the street from the City Marshal's. He called me over and said, "What are we going to do with that old woman?" I said, "What are you talking about?" He said, "That old woman over there. She's about seventy years old, and she has no friends and no money and she's starving, and what are we going to do with her?" I've called the county sheriff and he won't do anything about it, and I've called the Welfare and they won't do anything about it." I said, "It's out of my line, but we'll do something." I went over there-- (part of what he says is difficult to understand because of conversation going on between Jess and Mrs. Stegall). We went over to the Welfare office and I talked to Mr. _____ over there, he's the big boy down there. And he was very kind and pulled the file on her and said, "Well, she's got a pretty good income." I said, "Well, I don't know her." She'd been up at the Seiling Nursing Home, and she'd been out with these men. They would know when her money would be deposited up there and they'd go and get her, you know, and take her down town. And they'd take her out and spend her money
