

(That was his home place?)

Oh yes right there at the home place. Yeah he had some orphans there.

But I just couldn't tell you what his name was. I don't know, would know either. (Sentence not clear). He's been dead for years, you know. He was there when I was a little one. I was small when we used to go by there, going to town. We went right there, oh as close to there as that timber up there or closer. He had a windmill there and there was a pond there, you know. I guess they made meal there. They said they did. We just only like people going to town, you know. I been there since, you know, but at that time. (And he educated those orphans right there. Well, what a wonderful person he must have been.)

Used to take the, get the mail there and bring it up there at that place.

(Yeah.)

Right there at that bend is the place where they'd hand the mail out for persons to pick it up, you know. They'd go down and get it. I don't know how you would find out what his given name was. I don't know who would know. Why did you think it was Dick?

(Why (not clear) . . .)

He talked Shawnee, see, he's dead now. He died, not too long ago, but he was a nephew of old JourneyCake down here.

NOT MANY DELAWARES IN THE AREA

(Were there many Delawares in this part of the country?)

No.

(They were all further north and back west.)

Yeah, back west. No, there's only few Delaware families here.

(I guess Saul Ketchum was the most prominent of the Delawares.)

Yeah. As far as I know.
