

(No just to live, though.)

If you are retired, it's a good place to live.

(And of course, there's lot of Indians he re too.)

Most of them, like my boys, they go to Tulsa. They live there.

(Yeah. Uh-huh.)

And they (not clear) I don't know whether you know (not clear)

(Mr. Tyner, not clear)

Mrs. Postoak: Those kids go into town. Oh it just made you wish you could go. Once in a while when I did get to go to town. I just barely had a little money to buy some little inexpensive things.

(Yeah.)

While I'd see the others spend money and pricing everything.

(Yeah. It makes a person appreciate what they've got today, don't it?)

It sure does.

(When children went to school in those days that are living now--these young folks--)

Mrs. Postoak: They appreciated things that they got then.

(They would.)

Mrs. Postoak; They're not appreciative of what they got.

(No.)

Oh no.

(No they don't know.)

That's because it's just given to them.

(Yeah.)

They don't have to work for it.

Unidentified Voice: They didn't have to. It's just given to them. I had to wear work shoes to Sunday School, school.

(Well. Was this your original home here?)
