

Pretty close, yeah, most of 'em.

(Of course, there's still quite a few still around here.)

Yeah.

(Well, that's a big help, too.)

The Youngs that was quite a big family. See now John he had two boys, I believe. Ed Young and Nathan. They had children. One of 'em lives at Dewey now. His name is Nathan Young. Quite a few of those. And that JourneyCake, now, there was a bunch of them.

(There must have been a bunch of those.)

Yeah, there's a bunch of those JourneyCake.

(But they have all disappeared?)

I guess they pretty near have. (words not clear) He was a JourneyCake.

(Yeah.)

You have Jake down here at Dewey. He married a JourneyCake. Her name is Maggie, Maggie JourneyCake. Oh a bunch of them, you know even owned stores over there.

(That's right. There was some of them.)

Used to be a Campbell. One over at Coffeerville, he was a banker over there a long time. Herb Campbell. Then there's a Barndollar. Now there out of that -- .

(The Barndollars were Delawares.)

Barndollar, Campbell, there's another branch off of that JourneyCake.

What was that? Then there was some of them JourneyCakes. The last JourneyCake now was a Jack. 'Course he has some children. There's some boys by the name of JourneyCake around Coffeyville yet. Now Jack went over there. I met him several times. Met him over at Lenapah.
