

Yeah.

(Uh-huh. How much have you got here now?)

There's thirty acres in all.

(Well that's about all you want to take care of isn't it?)

Yeah. Lots of birds come here. Feed them. They got to eating with out chickens. I told him I was going to get some chicken feed. And I said, "Well I won't call it chicken feed anymore. I'll just call it bird seed."

(Bird seed.?)

Yeah. So I just feed them like I always did. Chickens and birds I--first time when I commence feeding them, one or two redbirds here. And now--the other day, the old lady, I think she said she counted twenty or twenty-five.

(Well.)

Birds. Out there at one time.

(Yeah. Well they learn don't they.)

Yeah. And those, I believe, that these here--when they stayed here a winter or two, I believe--when they made a nest, I believe they just around the place.

(That's right. They do.)

Course they never have failed to get feed when they come out there.

(Yeah, well they remember those things.)

Yeah. I haven't found no doves yet. I don't know.

REGARDING SNAKES

Had a neighbor. He had a pet snake. Looked in there, and saw that big old black snake all curled up in there. Didn't have no eggs. He said right then, he said "I fell out with my pet."

(Well he kept that old snake for a pet until he learned what he was doing.)

Yeah.

(Well they'll get that way all right.)
