

Yeah.

(Did they have Indian payment over there or where did you go when you had your Indian payment back around 1900 or whenever that was? I don't know whether they called it the imigrant payment or the strip payment.)

No. Where they went and got that strip payment I think they went to Vinita.

(Vinita)

Yeah, I know they did.

(Yeah. That was a long trip, wasn't it from here?)

Yeah, in a wagon.

(It sure was. Well, they had a courthouse at Vinita, too, at one time.)

Yeah, they did.

(Of some kind)

Yeah, but that was after this one was gone.

(Yes ma'am Yeah, I've often wondered back in those early days since they didn't have sheriffs and police like they have now days, how did they keep the law and Order or did they keep any?)

When they was holding court over there?

(Well, no just every day.)

Oh yeah.

(Someone raised a fuss. Why?)

JEFF MUSKRAT

They had sheriffs and things, you know.

(Yeah)

And they kept peace. Jeff Muskrat was one of them.

(Well. He was a, well I guess be the same as the sheriff they have now days then.)

Yeah.

SPLITLOG WAS A SENECA INDIAN

(Now how close are you folks to the Seneca country?)
