

(Yeah)

We had our own meat, didn't have to buy lard nor meat neither.

(Well, you folks didn't hardly have to buy anything then, did you?)

No, all we had to get was flour and coffee and sugar.

(Yeah)

We raised our own beans and such as that.

(No, flour and coffee and sugar and salt was about all you had to get.)

Yeah then we'd have wheat and have (not clear) and you know take that wheat to Southwest and put a lot of flour in the mill up there and have it and take our corn and have it ground. We had our own bread now we didn't live like we living now.

(Now days everybody have to go to the store.)

Oh yeah.

(Yeah in the old days they had a whole lot to offer.)

Yeah, it was just better in these days, in my books. I sure wouldn't trade--

NEIGHBORS WERE FRIENDS IN EARLY DAYS

(Well, that's what Mr. Fields said. He said the old days were much better than what they are now.)

Yeah they was. And people, there'd be anybody sick anywhere, you know, they'd, all the people would go and sit up with them or do their work while they was sick. Couldn't do theirself. But now, you know, you got to pay for it.

(That's right)

If you don't have money to pay--

(No people don't come and help now days.)

No, they don't.

(I don't know what's happened. I don't have any answer for it.)

The world's lost the love for the people.
