

Oh yes.

(I bet that was a busy place when they had court there.)

Oh yes. Saline Court House, then they had one at Going Snake.

(Yeah.)

Then Cooweescoowee. That's across the river over there, you know. That's the biggest county there ever was. Big as Texas.

(Yeah I guess so.)

Yeah, I wore knee pants when I first saw a train at Chouteau.

(Well)

Yeah ago. My grandmother lived down there near, down below (not clear).

She used to raise hogs. Lots of pecan trees down there. Them hogs would get fat on them pecans.

(Well, hogs would get fat on pecans. Well that would be good meat, wouldn't it.)

We used Dutch oven. Cooked bread like they used to long years ago.

(The old times that was the best.)

Harvest in the fall.

(Yes.)

Have punkin to eat all winter. And just dry the punkins and soak and cook them just like you would apples or anything. Good things to eat.

(Yes.)

We had lots of vittles when we were growing up. There was lots of deer.

We didn't hunt deer. We just had a place to salt them. On the break there was a big old post oak flat up there. Father had a scout place up in a tree.

Get up there and wait until they come and kill him a buck. Early in daylight just like star light saw one standing out there. I've got a loading chute behind that barn. The first shot I shot he fell in behind that.
