

(Now he was the interpretor down at Tahlequah.)

Yeah.

(Now who were some of the other good interpretors?)

Richard Glory was one.

(Richard Glory, yeah.)

George Bengé was one of them. Yeah I knew George Bengé pretty well. he (unclear) was (unclear) and Levi Grits.

(Levi Grits, yeah he was a good interpretor.)

And I think Simon Walkingstick was a good--

(Simon Walkingstick.)

Houston Teehee oh yeah, he died and they tell me he died a pauper.

(Well my goodness.)

You know at one time, they tell me his name was on these money payments.

(Yeah, that's right.)

I know where his place is. Out east on that road going to the river. He had a nice home out there.

(Was he a lawyer too? That Houston Teehee.)

Yeah he was a lawyer.

(Humm--)

But you know, I saw him, I don't know, not too long ago before he died. He had on big overalls, jumper. Didn't look like he used to. His brother, Martin Teehee and my oldest brother were classmates in school.

(Do you remember preacher used to be down in that country?)

Well no I don't know.

(Those old preachers, preached those fire and brimstone sermons. I mean they could really --)

Manus, I remember him.

(Yeah.)
