Rufus George,
Investigator,
April 18, 1937.

Interview With Fannie Fulson,
Kallyville, Oklahoma.

I am eighty-three years old; I was born near Polecat Creek and belong to the Long Tiger Band of Indians. I do not remember my parents for I was very small when they died.

~~There are lots of the old Indian Superstitions. The~~ first one is about baby clothes. Don't let baby's clothes hang outside during the night time for something may bewitch the baby some day. Don't throw dish water out at night time for your grandmother will get you. Don't throw your hair outside on the ground for the birds will pick up your hair and will make a nest out of them, and a person will have a headache. Do not burn the hair off of any person for they say that when you are dying God will punish a person that has burned their hair. They have said God will make a person hunt all of the hair they have burned before they can get forgiveness from God.

When anyone out of the tribe dies they say don't travel at night for there are spirits here up on the earth and they will hurt you some way. You never will get well of the sickness whatever the spirits have done to a person. That is the teaching of the living person and it is still going on at the present time.
