

INDEX CARDS

Openings--Old Oklahoma
Marshall
Openings--Cherokee Strip
Water--Oklahoma Territory
Pioneer life--Oklahoma Territory
Saloons--Oklahoma Territory
Freighting
Railroads--Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe
Townsites--Oklahoma Territory
Water--Towns
Farming--Oklahoma Territory
Oil--Marshall

1980), Amer. J. Hum. Genet. 37: 345-353; Am. J. Med. Genet. 1: 101-108.

for December 19

rain and to be .

• has have, ha - və, ha

AMT PER 100

continues.

1966-1970-1974-1978

(freshly cut) and the like.

streams      cities      ?

man who's PACED 51 times in 10 years

whitel 8.10.03 11:56

"The Swan of Tuonela" by Jean Sibelius

01 fbs tw mc

Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law, Vol. 35, No. 4, December 2010
DOI 10.1215/03616878-35-4 © 2010 by The University of Chicago

III. THE USE OF METACOGNITION

• 1971 年 11 月 15 日

dotted results.

"This is a good example of how the right kind of support can help a small business succeed."

"I'm going to get you a new one."

Miles-Mee factors for each index

Statement That the term "Linen" means the following:

stone bridge

steel bridge

picket fence

brick and stone concrete

Charlevoix 41

1. The following is a list of the principal towns in the state:

Paraharit - 1.000.000

Winneshiek - 1.000.000

Hood River - 1.000.000

Crossroads - 1.000.000

Ho-Harmon - 1.000.000

Miller River - 1.000.000

Al City - 1.000.000

Perry - 1.000.000

Immediatel - 1.000.000

---

1. Wabel Rice - home

2. The census of 1910 gave the following numbers of the population in 1910 in the townships of Township 14 (later Marquette township) - population of the Eleventh Census report, 1,216.

3. Wabel Rice - son

the other side of the above named claim, divided it bet en them, each securing in this way 16<sup>1</sup>/2 acres in a strip three quarters of a mile long joinin' the Cherokee outlet.

When it became apparent that other bus ness<sup>es</sup> were ready to locate at Mrsid, Sylvan Joe was willing to cut a farm tract to him about one and a half miles from the outlet, then letter off a portion of their farms, using the division line to "in" tree and thereby locating half the tract on each claim. Sylvan Joe then agreed his son re t the site, other buildings were con structed, and by the time the Cherokee outlet was ginned Mrsid had become a village.

This being over the st partured event in the history of the little town. At soon time home-seekers had been col lecting on the border, working for the farmers living in the ~~wooded~~ abandoned "dugouts" of such settlers as had abandoned these lowly habitations, or camping on the sun scorched prairie. The water in Marshall was all they had because it was bad, and in this time of drought the shortage became acute. Finally the

---

1. Louis Cromer, Jan. 1, 1901.

2. Louis Cromer.

sixteenth of September arrived. Many of the "old settlers" came in to town as sympathetic spectators. If even a wilder race than they had engaged in four years before. The entire country had been burned off in order that the corner stones could be more easily located, and the level blackened plain stretched north to the horizon hardly drier than the grass beneath their feet. The waiting became more tense; the signal was given, the furious race began, and the Cherokee Outlet became a land of homes. Marshall had doubled her trade territory in one day.

The settlers, however, had very little hope to spend. There were a few staple groceries; bolts of dry goods--mostly

---

1. Sometimes they assisted the newcomers in a sort of legal "soonering." The following story is told of Ed McLean, who later became rather prominent in Logan County politics. While waiting for the opening he was working for a farmer named La Seur, who lived on a claim four miles south of Marshall. As there was no law to prevent La Seur from entering the country he selected a fine claim; then he undertook to train McLean's pony to find it. Every day he started to the line, raced to the claim he had located, and gave the pony a good feed of oats. The intelligent animal soon developed a strong partiality for the spot where oats grew so abundantly. When the signal was finally given for homesteaders to enter the forbidden land young McLean's pony raced straight as an arrow to one of the best claims in the "Strip." (Told by Mrs. E. P. Debo.)

2. Jabel Rice Cromer.

3. There was some actual hunger among the settlers. The writer has heard several of the pioneers tell of living on boiled kafir because they had no money to buy flour. Sylvan Rice once discovered a farmer's wife stealing groceries. When confronted with her guilt she answered, "Yes, I stole. And if you don't want me to steal again you'd better watch me. My children are hungry, and as long as I can't get food for them any other way I intend to steal." The kind hearted merchant loaded her arms with provisions, and the family still owns the farm that was held at such a sacrifice (incident related by Mrs. E. P. Debo.)

salts, and sulphur, a few barrels of corn oil, flour, and meal, and the necessary hardware. This, the same day I rode to him, the Agency office was the only store open. An extravagant night newspaper and the end of the day. There were the real materials which a man had started to get the first sale, for the frontier had to be supplied with the wants of settlers and more so than ever as time went on. Then as they had been to enter into some membership data in August and September. Then there were the sales on the number which always seemed somehow or other proportionate to the population. All the goods was freighted about twenty miles across the country from Mulhall or Orlando on the east, or Remondon or the Rock Islands, at a cost of 11 to 20 cents per hundred. And the farmers had to haul their produce to the same markets. Every legal business had to be transacted at Guthrie, which was the county seat as well as the territorial capital. To reach that town one had to drive thirty miles up the black prairie in sand, and cross the treacherous Cimarron.

---

1. All of the children and some of the women were barefooted except during the coldest weather.

2. A school reader was a very acceptable Christmas present for a child.

3. The Marshall Tribune, July 4, 1902.

p.6

The town was about one mile from bank and a flour mill and a few houses were scattered here and there on the surface. The population at that time was about 1000 people. The town had a prosperous appearance and a good market was established.
spirit.

The first business was a small general store owned by Mr. John principal. He had a large number of customers and the town soon became organized. The town was built on a hill and the buildings were constructed of logs and stone. The town was very quiet and peaceful.
seemed to be little activity. The town was built on a hill and contributed to the quietness of the town. The town was very quiet and peaceful.
Instead of a large population the town was very quiet and peaceful. The town was built on a hill and the buildings were constructed of logs and stone.
move the town to a more convenient location. The town was very quiet and peaceful.
sale of land. The town was very quiet and peaceful. The town was very quiet and peaceful.
town lots. The town was very quiet and peaceful. The town was very quiet and peaceful.
Fort Smith's earliest newspaper was the Fort Smith Daily on the new site of the town. The town was very quiet and peaceful.

---

1. The Tribune

The population of Marshall County, in the year 1870, Twelfth census.

2. The Tribune, June 20, July 27, Aug. 3, 1870.

3. Ibid., Oct. 10, 1870.

BERO, ANG

HISTORY OF MARSHALL, O.

delightful water. The sale was announced at "the hotel" held with brightness for a week, a fair initial valuation.

It was to begin Aug. 18, 1900.

The sale was successful. On the 18th of the month lots were sold in lots. In the Marshall Tribune it was stated probably the largest amount of money ever taken in one day was $10,000. Lots reserved to the day for.

The people who also drove the tide were the townsmen. In order to sell lots out who hit the roulette wheel in the new buildings. Civil, electric stores were filled in the section. Landings of stone found all along the river. The Wyckoff's saloon was second. Its enterprising proprietor

1. One cannot appreciate this statement if he is unfamiliar with the water. It has an oily taste, and a tendency to curdle in great sticky flakes when it came into contact with soap. To make matters worse the supply was inadequate.

2. The Tribune, May 1, 1900.

3. The Tribune, May 30, 1900.

4. The writer distinctly remembers hearing one of these irreconcilables declare that he never expected to ~~ever~~ go into church after he was moved with his disease, unless it might be on the occasion of a funeral. His name, however, conveys the impression that he honest funerals of members of the town Company would be prompt and frequent.

5. The Tribune, Aug. 1, 1900.

p.6.

"Getting ready for the rush of business which is already in sight."<sup>1</sup> At the same time so many new buildings were under construction that the exultant cry of "Marshall's boomin! boomng! boomng!" became almost a chant. With an optimism not vindicated even at the present date the Marshall Tribune declared

"now it is only a question of a short time until instead of a little village of 200 inhabitants we will have a thriving little city of 1200 or 1500. Instead of the rickety old buildings which have done duty since the opening, we will have new substantial wood and stone buildings."

Best of all for the farmers whose weary horses had hauled the wheat twenty miles to a railroad, grain elevators were being constructed.<sup>2</sup> The moving and building continued during the fall and winter until by the spring of 1902 only a few scattered dwellings remained on the old site, and a thriving village stood where wheat had grown the year before.

---

1. The Tribune, Aug. 22, 1902.

The following advertisements in the Tribune are interesting in this connection:

"A cold glass of beer at Miff's when you are warm will refresh you." June 6, 1902.

"Best whiskey in Oklahoma at .3.00 per gallon. Miff (Wyckott)." Aug. 1, 1902.

"The place to refresh yourself is at Miff's in the next town." Sept. 5, 1902.

And the following news item is characteristic:

"Nicholas Bourger has erected a porch in front of his saloon which adds materially [sic.] to the appearance of his building." Sept. 26, 1902.

---

2. The Tribune, July 4, 1902.

---

3. Ibid., Aug. 22, 1902. See also Aug. 23.

In the meantime all the honor of the little community were centered on the railroad. The beginning of construction at Mud Creek in July inspired the Garfield Tribune to its most fertile venture.<sup>1</sup> And every state of the union was for pressed southward, war-hatted with the slogan "Appaloosa" were filled up to the brim with construction engineers. Guthrie was positive the fence was finished long before while Tulsa was dubious but the tie was enough; Senator Clark of Montana<sup>2</sup> was satisfied in the opinion of his son that the ocean could check the ultimate extension westward. Western Kansas were reported to be badlands, and the location citizens of Denver were apprehensive about their Big Spring place on High Ground was declared to be the best. The terminus was to be located either near the mouth of the Gulf, or a branch road was to connect with the Atlantic.

The first wire connected with the outside world, Feb. 1, 1902,<sup>3</sup> and construction was begun. <sup>4</sup> Mrs. <sup>5</sup> went to the house.

---

1. Ibid., July 6, 1902.
2. Ibid., July 20, 1902. Clipping from Guthrie State Capital.
3. Ibid., Aug. 1, 1902, being given to Mrs. <sup>5</sup> Hove.
4. The Tribune, June 2, 1902. Clipping from Garfield County Democrat.
5. The Tribune, Aug. 1, 1902. Clipping from Miss Hove.
6. The Tribune, July 22, 1902. Clipping from Guthrie State Capital.
7. Probably about Oct. 31. The Tribune, Oct. 24.

p.10.

the southern terminal. A few years later work was begun north of Elida,<sup>1</sup> and the road eventually reached Kiowa, Kansas. It was then purchased by the Santa Fe system, and forms a connecting link between the two main lines, the one that runs through Amarillo to California, and the one crossing Oklahoma from north to south before the opening. The other one of Marshall's two railroads failed to reach even this limited realization.

By the spring of 1905 Marshall was possessed of a new location, a railroad, several new business houses, and boundless civic ambitions. The next step was its incorporation under the name of New Marshall.<sup>2</sup> C. J. Miatz was the town's first mayor.<sup>3</sup> One of the first ordinances, if not the very first, was an act forbidding saloons to open before 5:00 A. M. or to remain open later than 12:00 P.M., and providing for Sunday closing.<sup>4</sup> As there were five saloons for a population that could hardly have reached 400 it would seem that they must have been able to accomodate the most of their patrons within these legal limits.

Unfortunately water was not so abundant as other liquids. The wells drilled on the residence lots proved disappointing,

1. The Tribune of Dec. 15, 1905. Clipping from Guthrie State Capital.

2. Thirteenth Census Report, 113,448.

3. The Tribune, May 8, 1905.

4. Passed May 7, 1905. Marshall Tribune, May 8.

yielding only a scanty supply of water, vile in taste, impossible to cleanse, and with a propensity to eat holes in cooking utensils. Finally a city well was dug that produced a fairly abundant supply of usable water. A windmill was installed and the water was pumped into an elevated tank and piped to a couple of hydrants on Main Street and to a watering trough for 1. teams. The Marshall Tribune could exult, "Now let those who have been sneering at Marshall's water go away, away back, and keep still."

This system, of course, did not provide water for household use, and there was a man called the "water monkey" whose regular business it was to haul water from this city well and sell it by the barrel to housewives. In time cisterns were constructed at the residences and the carefully hoarded rain-water supplied most of the needs of the population.

For years Marshall lived under the constant menace of fire. In times of drought when the cisterns and even the town well had gone dry there was the certainty that any fire securing a good headway would sweep the town. It is difficult now to understand the intense indignation of the populace against two or three persons who were so careless as to start a blaze. Fortunately every incipient fire was arrested in its early stages by the volunteer 2. firemen and the little chemical engine that they drew by hand.

1. Ibid., Sept. 18, 1903. See also July 31.

2. For example see Tribune, June 30, 1905. A few disastrous fires have taken place in Marshall, but fortunately they came after the installation of city water.

DEPT.

prior mention being made and without any hand, nor even planted by the <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> explanations being given as the reason for the among the <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> were their <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup>
the, and the <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup>

The last <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> and golden in was <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> structure" <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup>

During the <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> red by oil excitements of <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> ed conclusion to the <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> swindler. However there is no evidence printed by the Marshall Daily <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> pulling out of the water <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup> <sup>any</sup>

-
1. The Tribune, April 15, & April 22, 1901.
  2. Ibid., Feb. 8, March 17, April 14, & April 21. Also June 25.

p.13

to market and will bear the oil traffic when the gushers are a reality.<sup>1</sup> That one dream of the builders of Marshall was realized.

Another interesting object was the plan initiated by the Marshall Tribune to move the Kaspian and Union line two miles north. All through the summer and fall of 1905 a campaign was carried on to induce the farmers to plant cotton. One editorial even carried the following argument:

Any boy or girl ten years old can pick enough cotton in the evening after school hours to board and clothe them all winter. What they pick on Saturday is clear gain to the farmer.<sup>2</sup>

Some of these arguments proved so convincing that a large cotton acreage was planted and a gin was built at Marshall. However, the wheat farmers soon became tired of a crop that kept them "working thirteen months a year,"<sup>3</sup> the parents were unwilling to keep their children out of school, all the people objected to the presence of negroes in the community, and after a few years the farmers went back to wheat exclusively, and the gin fell into disuse.<sup>4</sup>

1. Ibid., March 17. The form of this quotation has been changed slightly.

2. Ibid., Nov. 17, 1905. See also Oct. 12, and Nov. 3.

3. A. I. Debo

4. Marshall has an unwritten law against the presence of a negro in the town after sundown.

The most picturesque event of all this feverish period of promotion was the sale in which the remaining lots in the townsite were disposed of by lottery. The sale was carried through by W. H. Munro of Kansas City. Through extensive advertising of the possibilities of the undeveloped land of Oklahoma and the future of the new railroad center which had been a wheat field three years before, 16,000 thousand lots, principally to investors in the north central states; when the time for the drawing arrived between two and three hundred contract holders were on the ground; the remainder were represented by proxies.

Fortunately for the reputation of Oklahoma there was no dust storm raging at the time. A gentle rain had cleared the atmosphere and there followed such days of blue and gold and tingling warmth as sometimes come in late November. The northern visitors were enchanted. They strolled over the town enjoying the perfect weather or gathered in animated groups to repeat the language of the advertising literature so enthusiastically that even its authors began to believe it. There was no drinking nor unseemly behaviour on the part of the visitors; it was a cheerful crowd willing to accept every inconvenience with the most whole hearted good nature. The ladies of the churches served meals, and the Rebekahs fitted up beds in the Odd Fellows hall.

---

1. The drawing took place November 23, 1905.

The drawing took place in the Methodist Church, and lasted far into the night. The books were then given for safe keeping to the lady member of the allotting committee. In the morning it was discovered that she had a plan to offer to secure lots of choice lots for herself at the expense of others. When she was confronted with the most absurd and erratic, made affidavit that she only wanted to secure them to her original owners occupying, or prepared to locate on a freight train. After being told that she had lied, she released herself officially from the drawing, and there were some who even showed their faith to the extent of buying the lots adjoining the ones she had drawn.

Of course the purchasers did not long retain their interest in an unproductive piece of land in a distant village, and soon they began to neglect the payment of taxes. People in the community began to buy up these lot titles, and crops of hay or potatoes or even wheat were grown on the vacant lots, with or without the knowledge of the owners.

From 1905 to 1927 the history of Marshall was uneventful. The people gave a hearty to their village and strived hard on making their little town a good place in which to live. The

---

1. The Tribune, Nov. 24, and Dec. 1, 1905

DEBO, ANCI, VICTORY K. R. SALL, O. H.

first school building at the first permanent location one year of ill school work was given. Subsequent tions were subsequently added to the original high school program.

secured in time for the opening.

placed the wooden school house in service.

last "Booster" for the new

arr--S. C. 1904

11. M. L. W. 1904

slogans of "Wheaton"

or "Wheaton" were used.

in the upper portion of the town.

FOUR, in the afternoon

the discovery of a body of a man

McGully last seen Bill & his wife thrown into the River at 2 o'clock

the passing of the body streets, re. streets were houses were destroyed.

1. Before this the village is located in a narrow valley one mile south of the old townsite.
2. The Tribune, July 15, and the Illinoian of the same date by the writer show that the first classes were held in the old building Dec. 5, 1904.
3. Thirteenth Census Report, Ill., 448.
4. Loc. et op. cit.
5. Fourteenth Census Report, I, 576

not been used.

to. for the purpose of the same name of the other person to whom the same was given by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

the same was given

by the same person to whom

Date

The author has written about the life of George Washington

and the time period he lived in.

He has written about the life of

George Washington

and the time period he

lived in.

He has written about the life of

George Washington

and the time period he

lived in.

He has written about the life of George Washington

and the time period he

lived in.

The life of George Washington

obscure offshoots of the main stream of history.

ambition, but in the end it was his ambition,

Marshall et al. wrote a book on the history sum of life and the lives they have taken.

"But for me a life is a school which must go on to continue, lest it should grow stale."

DEB, NO. 1 DISTRICT SCHOOL

P. C. R. & S. Main

1920-1921

The school is located in the town of Weymouth, Mass.

Building

is new and is a modern

one room school house and is well equipped

section line

District
School

DEPO, ANGIE STORY MARSHALL, OKLAHOMA

LIBRARY

Primary Sources

Census Reports:

Report on Population of the United States in the Eleventh Census, Part 1, Washington, 1890.

Twelfth Census of the United States, 1890, Washington.

Thirteenth Census of the United States, 1900, Washington, 1910.

Fourteenth Census of the United States, 1910, Washington.

Cromer, Louis (Son of Mr. Cromer), Marshall, Tex., 1920.

Cromer, Lelia Rice (Daughter of Sylvan Rice), Marshall, Tex., 1920.
Dec. 31, 1929.

Debo, . . . , Marshall, Okla.

Debo, Mrs. . . . , Marshall, Okla.

Marshall Tribune, The, (Founded 1871), Marshall, Okla.