These graves are situated on a little grassy knoll and the stones are plainly visible from the highway.

There used to be a small school house near this plot of ground called the Guffins School. The graveyard was therefore named Guffins. This school house blew away in 1890.

Mrs. Frazer, present owner, has entire quarter section in wheat and grazes her field each year. She would like the bodies moved as she feels no interest in the graves for she never knew any of those buried there nor their kin. All the graves are level and covered with grass and weeds.
